

NOTES ON AUTHOR

OLUWASEUN O. AFOLABI holds a PhD in Peace and Conflict Studies Programme, Institute for Peace and Strategic Studies, University of Ibadan, Nigeria. He presently has six academic publications, including a book, chapters in books, and articles in learned journals. His current research interests include church history, church conflict, religious conflict, conflict management, and resolution. E-Mail: oluwaseunafolabi@gmail.com.

SEAN BYRNE is a cofounder, former director, and professor of Peace and Conflict Studies at the Arthur V. Mauro Centre for Peace and Justice, St. Paul's College, University of Manitoba, Canada. He has published extensively in the area of critical and emancipatory peacebuilding and conflict transformation in divided societies. In 2018 he received the SPC Memorial Endowment Fund Award and in 2017 he received a university outreach award and FGS Award for Excellence in Graduate Student Mentoring. He was a consultant to the former special advisor to the former Irish Taoiseach on the decommissioning of weapons. He is a consultant to the senior advisor for Europe and Eurasia at the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the Northern Ireland peace process. E-Mail: Sean.Byrne@umanitoba.ca.

KENNETH CHRISTIE is the Program Head and a Professor in the Human Security and Peacebuilding graduate program at Royal Roads University in Victoria, Canada. Christie is a political scientist, author, editor, and international academic who has taught and conducted research at universities in the U.S., Singapore, South Africa, Norway and Dubai, and now Canada.

PEACE RESEARCH
The Canadian Journal of Peace and Conflict Studies
Volume 51, Number 1 (2019): 133-136
©2019 Peace Research

Working all over the world has given him a unique perspective on peace, development and human security. His work has focused on issues of human rights, security and democratization and more recently the relationship between migration and human security. E-Mail: Kenneth.1Christie@royalroads.ca.

DEAN J. JOHNSON is director of Peace and Conflict Studies, and associate professor of Philosophy at West Chester University of Pennsylvania. An interdisciplinary activist scholar, Johnson teaches courses in Peace Studies and Religious Studies. As an activist and scholar, Johnson is a consultant for nonviolent campaigns and initiatives. He provides workshops and training in the areas of nonviolent direct action, community organizing, and (with his partner Melissa Bennett) anti-oppression, queer solidarity, and anti-racism. Johnson is co-editor, along with Joan May Cordova, Matt Guynn, and Regina Shands Stoltzfus, of the forthcoming book: Resist, Organize, Transform: An Introduction to Nonviolence and Activism (Cognella Academic Publishing, 2019). E-mail: djohnson4@wcupa.edu.

STEPHANIE KERR is a postdoctoral fellow with the Institute of European, Russian, and Eurasian Studies at Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada. Research interests include conflict transformation, sub-state nationalism, European and EU politics, territorial governance, federalism and social movement studies. E-Mail: Stephanie.Kerr3@carleton.ca.

ALEXANDRA KUTZNESTOVA is a PhD Candidate in Peace and Conflict Studies at the Mauro Centre for Peace and Justice, University of Manitoba, Canada. She holds an M.A in Peace Studies from the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies, University of Notre Dame. Her current research focuses on the role of civil society in political transformation and emancipatory peacebuilding. E-Mail: kuznetsa@myumanitoba.ca.

BENJAMIN MAIANGWA is a PhD Candidate at the Arthur V. Mauro Centre for Peace and Justice, University of Manitoba, Canada. His research centres on ethnic conflict, emancipatory peacebuilding, and African politics. E-Mail: maiangwb@myumanitoba.ca.

BRETT M. MALLON is a PhD Candidate in Peace and Conflict Studies at the Mauro Centre for Peace and Justice, St. Paul's College, University of Manitoba. His current research interests include peacebuilding, divided societies, post-conflict reconstruction and reconciliation, and the role of civil society in the design and implementation of peace agreements. E-Mail: mallonb@myumanitoba.ca.

DAPHNE PILLAY is currently a lecturer employed at the University of Pretoria, South Africa. She has published and presented papers at national conferences and is currently part of a research project on self-leadership in volatile environments which sees the collaboration of both national and international researchers. Her areas of expertise are mainly research and statistics; ethical practice for practitioners, training, and development; and career psychology. She is registered as an Industrial Psychologist with the Health Professions Council of South Africa. Pillay is currently completing a PhD with the University of Free State and is interested in the feminisation of the labour force, positive organisational behaviour, and leadership. Her PhD is on building a model of resilience promoting factors for female leaders in higher education, with a particular focus on developing the psychological strengths of employees through research. E-Mail: Daphne.pillay@up.ac.za.

ERICH SCHELLHAMMER recently retired from Royal Roads University, Victoria, Canada, after a long career in justice studies. His research interest developed from finding a philosophical justification for the merits of cultural diversity to a phenomenological grounding of human rights in human ontology to embracing recent leadership studies to identify a new leadership category, which is peace leadership. His latest academic interest is in combining modern leadership studies with peace and conflict studies in order to formulate a framework for peace leadership. He has been the inaugural chair of the Peace Leadership Affinity Group of the International Leadership Association and has published numerous articles on peace leadership.

Erich lives in Canada and in Germany. E-Mail: Erich.Schellhammer@RoyalRoads.ca.

MARGUERITE VAN DIE is a professor emerita in history and religion at Queen's University, Kingston, Canada. Before her retirement in 2009, she held a joint appointment in Queen's Theological College and in the Department of History. Her primary research and teaching interests are in religion, family, and community in late Victorian Canada, and in religion and public life. E-Mail: vandiem@queensu.ca.

OLANREWAJU YUSUF is a doctoral student in Peace and Conflict Studies Programme, University of Ibadan, Nigeria. He has many academic publications of chapters in books and in learned journals. His current publication is titled A Handbook on Principles and Practice of Alternative Dispute Resolution for Peace Practitioners, and was published in 2013. His current research interests include environmental conflict, communication, migration, and social order. E-Mail: lance458@gmail.com.