

NOTES ON AUTHORS

HAVAL AHMAD is Associate Faculty member at Royal Roads University and teaches in the Master of Arts in Human Security and Peacebuilding program. His research interests include de-radicalization, terrorism, counterviolent extremism (CVE), Kurdish affairs, and conflict and human security in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region. His current work focuses on the de-radicalization of children and youth in the post-ISIS era. Other areas of Ahmad's work include analyzing geopolitics and foreign intervention in the MENA region and its impact on stability and human security. Email: haval.1ahmad@royalroads.ca.

COLM BRANNIGAN is a mediator, arbitrator, trainer, former sessional lecturer in ADR (alternative dispute resolution) at Queen's University's Faculty of Law, and a founding member of the Canadian Collaborative for Engagement & Conflict Management. Brannigan has a special interest in mediation processes, online dispute resolution, and integrated med-arb, and is the coauthor of ODR: Yesterday. Today. Tomorrow., the first Canadian book on online dispute resolution. He can be reached through his website www.mediate.ca.

TOM CULHAM has held senior leadership roles in engineering consulting and the British Columbia forest industry. After completing a PhD (Education), he recently joined Simon Fraser University's business school to lecture and conduct ethics education research. His most recent book, coauthored with Jing Lin and published by Palgrave MacMillan, is Daoist Cultivation of Qi and Virtue for Life, Wisdom, and Learning. Email: thomas_culham@sfu.ca.

PEACE RESEARCH
The Canadian Journal of Peace and Conflict Studies
Volume 55, Number 1 (2023): 1-133
©2023 Peace Research

AMANDA FIORE is a doctoral student in International Education Policy at the University of Maryland. Previously she earned her MFA in creative writing and worked extensively overseas as an English teacher, which led to her current research into the interplay of international education, linguistic imperialism, narrative research, and storytelling. She is a 2021 Boren Fellowship recipient and has conducted her dissertation research in Taiwan. Email: amandajaneiore@gmail.com.

CAROL GRIFFITHS, PhD, is an English language teaching (ELT) specialist who has taught in New Zealand, Indonesia, Japan, China, North Korea, Turkey, and the United Kingdom, gaining a basis for writing about peace. She currently works for Girne American University (North Cyprus) and as Research Professor at Auckland (NZ) Institute of Studies. She has presented at numerous conferences and published widely, including five books on language learning and teaching. Email: carolgriffiths5@gmail.com.

WENDY KROEKER, PhD, specializes in community conflict transformation processes as Associate Professor in Canadian Mennonite University's Peace and Conflict Transformation Studies department and in locations around the globe. She has over twenty-five years of experience as a community mediator, conflict transformation trainer, peace program consultant, program manager for international development projects, and university instructor. The Philippines, Indonesia, Myanmar, India, Bangladesh, and Palestine are some of the locations in which she has worked over the past two decades with Indigenous groups, NGO staff, community and religious leaders, and various educators. Email: wkroeker@cmu.ca.

MATTHEW LEGGE (BA Anthropology, University of Toronto) serves as Peace Program Coordinator for Canadian Friends Service Committee, the national peace and social justice agency of Quakers. He has supported local human rights initiatives in the Americas, the Caribbean, Africa, the Middle East, and Asia. His first book is Are We Done Fighting? Building Understanding in a World of Hate and Division (2019). Email: matt@quakerservice.ca.

JING LIN is Harold R.W. Benjamin Professor of International Education in International Education Policy at the University of Maryland, College Park. She has done extensive research on peace and environmental education; spirituality, religion, and education; Chinese and East Asian education; and women teachers and girls' education in Africa. She teaches courses on contemplative inquiry and holistic education and on education vis-à-vis global climate change, global peace, ecological ethics, and world religions, among others. Email: jinglin@umd.edu.

DENISE McHUGH is a PhD student in International Education Policy at the University of Maryland (UMD), with special interest in contemplative studies. She received an MA in Teaching from The George Washington University. For the past decade, McHugh has been the manager of UMD's multifaith chapel and adjacent Garden of Reflection and Remembrance. She serves as part of a team developing interfaith, faith-based, and spiritual programming, resources, and support for the university community. Email: dmchugh@umd.edu.

MARÍA MATILDE OLIVERO holds a PhD in Second Language Acquisition from the University of South Florida. She is a teacher and researcher in the area of teacher education at the English Teacher Education Program at the National University of Río Cuarto, Argentina. Her main areas of interest include teacher development, affective factors in second language teaching, and holistic and contemplative approaches in education with a focus on peace and well-being. Email: m.matilde.olivero@gmail.com.

REBECCA L. OXFORD, PhD, Professor Emerita and Distinguished Scholar-Teacher, University of Maryland, has led graduate programs in language education and in psychology and counselling, and is a frequent international speaker. Her fifteen books, many collaborative, concern language learning, peace language, peace cultures, language education and peace, and transformative education. She has co-edited three major book series. The most extensive was the sixty-nine-volume “Tapestry” series for ESL learners, with Middle Eastern, North American, Japanese, and Chinese editions. Email: rebeccaoxford@gmail.com.

SALLY ANNE PERZ is an English instructor at the University of Alabama at Birmingham (UAB). She has an MA in English with a concentration in rhetoric and composition and an Education Specialist degree in TESOL from UAB. Perz is pursuing a doctorate in Educational Studies in Diverse Populations, with a concentration in curriculum and instruction. Additionally, she volunteers in a community outreach organization where she teaches English to refugees. Email: sally118@uab.edu.

ANNIE RAPPEPORT (PhD, International Peace Studies, University of Maryland; MEd, University of Virginia), a former Wylie Dissertation Research Fellow, studied reconciliation-focused memory construction in post-genocide Cambodia. Her other research has included Cuban-Americans’ oral history; Indigenous knowledge systems; and Middle Eastern listening-centred peace work. Rappeport formerly interned for the National Coalition of Dialogue and Deliberation and implemented intercultural and interfaith dialogue exchanges at the Institute for Shipboard Education. Email: arap-pepo@gmail.com.

JOYCE SCHULTZ centres her work life on social peacebuilding. As a consultant, Joyce designed and delivered workshops for local governments and non-profit organizations developing low- and mixed-income housing. She helped people navigate life changes through facilitating divorce recovery workshops and self-development book studies, as well as caring for dementia patients. Viewing Joanna Macy’s workshop videos “The Work That Reconnects” has reignited Joyce’s passion for working to improve all our lives. Email: joycenschultz@gmail.com.